Salisbury Scribbings

The Halley bankrupt stock will be put on the market this week and some "bargains" are promised.

So far we have not seen a peach bloom, but cherry, pears, and apples are showing up all right. Will there be any peaches in the country?

We are having an usual amount of "winter weather" this spring, and as a result, gardens are covered up at night, fires are banked, young chickens are kept in coops and every body is cross.

The childrens entertainment for the benefit of the Orphan Home at St. Louis, given at the Christian Church Tuesday night was followed by a collection of $7.11, which amount seems small but will help some.

There is general regret here over the fire that occurred at the Lyric Theater last week, not so much on the account of the loss, as the incendiary origin of the fire. That any one could jeopardize the lives of a dozen individuals, and half million dollars worth of property, on account of greed or malice, is unthinkable and yet it has been done. The great amount of coal oil used in starting the inflammable material makes it patent that no other motive could have prompted the act. No effort should be neglected to hand down the guilty party.

Best Thing for a Bilions Attack

"On account of my confinement in the printing office, I have for years been a chronic sufferer from indigestion and liver trouble. A few weeks ago I had an attack that was so severe that I was not able to go to the case for two days. Failing to get relief from any other treatment, I took three of Chamberlain's Tablets and the next day I felt like a new man," writes H. C. Bailey, Editor Carolina News, Chapin S.
C. Obtainable everywhere.

Avoid Lightning

Thunder storms are due, and as every one knows, the fatality of lightning to people as well as stock has increased alarmingly in the past few years. There are double the number of electric storms and more than double the number of victims of lightning than there were five years ago.

Don't stand in an open door or sit near an open window during a storm, nor be near a stove or the corner of a room. Keep as near the center of a room as soon as you can whether in bed or out. Don't sit in a buggy attached to a pair of steaming horses in the middle of the road or anywhere else. Barns are dangerous hiding places.

Whooping Cough

"When my daughter had the whooping cough she coughed so hard at one time that she had hemorrhage of the lungs. I was terribly alarmed at her condition.
Seeing Chamberlain's Cough Remedy so highly recommended I got her a bottle and it relieved the cough at once. Before she had finished two bottles of this remedy she was entirely well," writes Mrs. S. F. Grimes, Crooksville, Ohio. Obtainable everywhere.

"Sir, I understand you said I had a face that would stop a street car in the middle of the block," said an angry woman.

"Yes, that's what I said calmly answered the mere man. It takes an unusually handsome face to induce a motorman to make a stop like that."

Defies Liquor at 96

"Uncle Rube" Johnson, for fifty years a drunkard, will celebrate his ninety-sixth actual and twenty sixth spiritual birthday at the McAuley Water Street Mission, New York, Easter Sunday afternoon.

"Uncle Rube" began his long struggle with rum at the early age of 20. At 70 he downed it, inspired by the exhortations of the mission, and now swears he is never going to touch another drop.

A Little Cayuse Mare

She was only a little cayuse mare. A present on his fourteenth birthday, some ten years before. She had been the companion of his boyhood. She carried him to high school. It was with the mare and the new red buggy, and right proud was he of both, that he ventured to call on his first girl. And in later years the little mare went with him to college and still later she was shipped to Montana to help in the making of that new home in the West.

Gentle, affectionate, always to be trusted, she had been the boys best friend during those all important years when childish illusions are laid away with tops and blocks and the other play-things of life's early days; she was still his comrade when the youth emerged into the man.

And now under the fitful, wintry sunlight, with the chill wind congealing the tears that slowly follow one another down his cheeks, he was slowly rounding up the frozen earth that marked her last resting place.

To the boys on the ranch she was only a cayuse mare, growing old and worthless; to him she was more than most people—comrade, companion of a hundred happy escapades of childhood, the last link that bound him to those boyhood days while life seemed so simple, the friend who had never betrayed him.

To the ranch men her death was merely an accident. To him it was a tragedy. And who is there that shall call him less of a man because the tears well-led up at the loss of this friend of the days when life was young?
How often has this scene been repeated since the days when man and horse first came together?

Down from the days before history was first carved on Egyptian stone; from the days when legend and traditions were handled from father to son; from bard to harper, come tales of the love of a man and his horse.

Man wrought civilization, but not by himself alone. Ever at his side, working steadily, suffering with him and willing to give life itself in his service, was man's best friend—the horse.

No one could calculate what the world would have been without him. He alone made possible the conquest of the prairie.

He brought the first men, hauled their food and supplies, rounded up their cattle and turned their sod. Ever in this day of marvelous mechanical devices for performing farm work he is still as indispensable as in the early days of the pioneer.

It is a far cry for some of us, from the heart of the dusty city to the vastness of a wind-swept plain; from the cushioned seat of limousine to the swaying creak of a saddle, yet it comes to us all at times. At times it comes to the city bred man who has never bestrode a horse just as strongly as it comes to you and me, who were raised on horeback; it is that instinctive love, bred thru the years of many centuries; the love of a man for his horse.

The passing years take their toll from all of us, they destroy many of the illusions that are with us when first we start out in life; yet the love and trust of man and horse go hand in hand until the end.

ifornia Syrup of Figs." take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt

Macon Local Option

The City of Macon is in several pecks of trouble over the delay in the decision by the Kansas City Court Appeals of the local option election held there some months ago. The Times Democrat published Saturday the resolutions based on a number of whereases defining conditions there, and also gave what Mayor Lacey had to say on the subject. It appears that under existing conditions dives, bootleggers, joints and all sorts of dispensing places are operating right along, and it is held that convictions could not be maintained.

Macon is only one of the cities making futile efforts to do the impossible, yet that the conditions there are worse than in any other place we know of, there seems to be little doubt, and all because the election was queered and probably amounts to no election. The Mayor and all other good people want the question of the validity of the election passed on as soon as possible and if it was null, then get after holding another as soon as it can be done.
